Final Examination Description

I wanted to do something not very complicated and something in the realms of possibilities for me. I originally had an after-effects animation in progress but that didn't go as well as it thought it was going to be. I completely scrapped that idea and just did something a little easier. So I did the comic book template because I felt that I could get it done much easier than making an animation.

I started looking through all of my phone clips and photos and took some of them to create a mini-comic. The mini-comic is basically about a student who procrastinates on completing his assignments. I'm not saying I necessarily procrastinate but it was an easy simple storyline and I stuck with it. I had to learn how to create text bubbles on my own, for what it is my project seems fine in my eyes and I'm pretty confident about it,
